Presidential Review of Current Counterintelligence Issues 1/

The President should undertake a classified review* of current issues regarding counterintelligence to provide the basis for his enunciating a classified Presidential statement on national counterintelligence policy and objectives.

Issues involved, on many of which there appear to be different and partly incompatible approaches, and which demand reconciliation, include:

- a. Proper degree of compartmentation of counterintelligence information
- b. Methods of operation
- c. Approaches to security
- d. Research priorities and extent of analytical counterintelligence effort
- e. Deception activities
- f. Training
- g. Extent and nature of liaison and coordination
- h. Manpower
- i. Accountability and internal review

Background:

The need for such a Presidential review arises because:

- a. Two distinct and partly incompatible approaches to counterintelligence have emerged and demand reconciliation;

*The Senate Committee Report recommended that the review be in consultation with the intelligence oversight committee(s) of Congress.

1/Senate Report, pp440, 442, 172

b. Recent evidence also suggests that FBI counterespionage results have been less than satisfactory;

c. Counterintelligence has infringed on the rights and liberties of Americans; and

d. Finally, there is no effective interagency mechanism for settling disputes between the CIA and the FBI.
